

Creating Impact Through Integration in Today's Complex Marketplace

The Master of Professional Studies in Integrated Marketing Communications (IMC) arms students with the skills they need to work strategically across the full breadth of communications specialties to create and manage comprehensive and effective marketing campaigns. Through practical applications and client experiences, students master the complexities of multiple media platforms while developing the creative and strategic mindset necessary to engage the consumer.

The IMC curriculum focuses on the inherent challenges of working across communications disciplines—including public relations, advertising, direct marketing, and word-of-mouth marketing—as well as the ever-evolving role of digital media. Additionally, the curriculum explores ethical boundaries within the context of IMC, including consumer research and privacy, the art of persuasion, and paid versus earned media.
