

POLITICAL THEOLOGY: AN INTRODUCTION

Mondays, 6:30 PM – 9:30 PM, White-Gravenor 206B
September 2 – December 9

Course Description

There is no question that we are witnessing a revival of political theology as an academic discipline; a theology that has, through the ages, adapted to exigencies like secularization, modernization, globalization, et al. As an academic discipline, political theology addresses questions such as, the relationship between theology and politics; the relationship between Church and State; the role of religion in public life; and, to what extent religious belief might/should shape our political discourse.

Introduction to Political Theology is a graduate course that will explore the historical roots of political theology, while examining the philosophical, theological, and sociological relationship between religious faith and political life in civil society. Class readings will highlight some of the primary sources that influenced religious and secular practices and the ordering of society through the ages. We will look at the first generation of political theologians (Johann Baptist Metz, who started it all) and the second generation of political theologians (Cavanaugh, Hau-erwas, Milbank, O'Donovan, Yoder). Our discussions will focus on the age-old tension between the transcendent and secular, the sacred and the profane, and how this on-going oscillation has shaped and continues to shape public discourse.

Through classroom discussion, reading of primary sources and class presentations, the pedagogy of this course is designed to bring students up to date in the growing field of political theology.

Course Goals

To provide an intellectual framework and analytical tools for students to discuss, reflect upon and understand the foundations and major players in the development of political theology, and the interaction between politics and the church.

Learning Objectives

The following objectives are built into the pedagogy of this course syllabus:

1. To provide an awareness, knowledge & understanding of the primary historical, philosophical and ecclesial sources of political theology
2. To help students recognize the interaction between politics and religion
3. To critically examine how secular and religious discourse critique each other
4. To present the major players in the development and influence of political theology
5. To help students formulate personal positions on the role of theology in public life

Evaluation

Students are expected to attend lectures, read assigned texts, submit term paper & essays, and participate in discussion, as well as display an ability to absorb, comprehend, and analyze the course material.

Course Requirements

- Reading Assignments
- Submit three short analytical essays (3 pages each, max) on assigned readings. Topics will be distributed for take home one week in advance
