COURSE DESCRIPTION

The emergency and disaster management discipline is increasingly faced with complexity--complexity in crisis situations, politics and policy, social vulnerability and resilience, community perceptions of risk, and more. These complexities can be addressed by collecting, analyzing, and disseminating data and results, and it is important to understand the different research approaches available to researchers and knowledge practitioners. It's also important to understand the different philosophical assumptions and interpretive foundations that frame our understanding. This course explores quantitative, qualitative, and mixed methods research approaches, drawing on the interdisciplinary literature that emergency and disaster management draws from. Students will conduct critical evaluations of research design and dissemination, and construct a research proposal for a topic of their choice. This course also explores the many ethical considerations taken when conducting research in the emergency and disaster management discipline.

COURSE LEARNING

OBJECTIVES

By the end of this course, you will be able to do the following:

1. Articulate the epistemological and practical differences in research approaches, and critique different approaches on their advantages and disadvantages
2. Identify an issue, problem, or knowledge gap and design an appropriate research framework to address the issue, problem, or knowledge gap
3. Synthesize and critically evaluate the state of the knowledge and research approaches in EDM through case studies
4. Employ appropriate analytical and dissemination techniques
5. Discuss the ethics of research in emergency and disaster management, and gain familiarity with Georgetown University's Institutional Review Board
6. Appraise the evolution of research and the interdisciplinary nature of emergency and disaster management

REQUIRED READINGS

The following readings are available for purchase at the Georgetown Bookstore and online vendors:

COURSE EXPECTATIONS

This course is conducted entirely online, which means students do not have to be on campus to complete any portion of it. Students will participate in the course using Georgetown University's online learning management system called Canvas. Each new module that is released will open on a Tuesday at 11:59 pm (ET), two weeks before the module formally begins. Students are required to move through each module in sequential order. This course consists of 10 modules.

Student Expectations

At the beginning of each module, preview the module so that you can plan your time accordingly. Take note of the various readings and assignments with their due dates. Notice whether assignments are individual or group assignments so that you allocate time for communication and collaboration. Be aware that many modules end with a substantive assignment.

Participation is essential to your success in this class. You are expected to engage actively in discussion boards, complete all module activities, and collaborate on group and class assignments. The quality of your participation does contribute to your grade in this course.

Present yourself as the professional you are or aspire to be. Do good work, proofread what you write, and communicate respectfully. Remember, your classmates are your future colleagues.

As a Georgetown University graduate student, you are expected to put forth your best efforts in completing the course readings, assignments, and activities.

Time Expectations

Our online classes are designed to meet the same time requirements as our place-based (face-to-face) courses. For a 3-credit, 15-week course, students should expect to spend approximately 9-12 hours per week participating in the course and completing all course assignments.

Absences

There are no excused absences in an online course.

ACADEMIC INTEGRITY

All students are expected to maintain the highest standards of academic and personal integrity in pursuit of their education at Georgetown. Academic dishonesty in any form is a serious offense, and students found in violation are subject to academic penalties that include, but are not limited to, failure of the course, termination from the program, and revocation of degrees already conferred. All students are held to the Georgetown Honor Code.

The Honor Code pledge follows:

In the pursuit of the high ideals and rigorous standards of academic life, I commit myself to respect and uphold the Georgetown University Honor System: To be honest in any academic endeavor, and To conduct myself honorably, as a responsible member of the Georgetown community, as we live and work together.

Plagiarism

Stealing someone else's work is a terminal offense in the workplace, and it will wreck your career in academia, too. Students are expected to work with integrity and honesty in all their assignments. The Georgetown University Honor System defines plagiarism as "the act of passing off as one's own the ideas or writings of another." More guidance is available through the Gervase Programs. If you have any doubts about plagiarism, paraphrasing, and the need to credit, check out Plagiarism.org.

COURSE ACTIVITIES AND ASSIGNMENTS

Each module includes readings and other materials, discussion boards for engaging with your peers around the course content, and assignments that provide an opportunity to apply your newly acquired knowledge and practice important skills.

Students are expected to participate in all course-related activities.

There are four synchronous sessions planned for this course: an orientation session near the beginning of the course, an interview of an emergency manager, a mid-semester check in, and a final project check-in. Additional synchronous sessions may be added to accommodate guest speakers. Synchronous sessions will be recorded, and students who are unable to attend the live session are required to view the recording. Dates and time of synchronous sessions will be announced through Canvas. Students must notify me in advance if they are unable to attend a synchronous session, and they may be given an alternate required assignment.

Written work is due by the assigned due date on Canvas. You must submit your weekly written assignment online by the time assigned in Canvas; do not send your papers to other personal or professional email addresses. Follow-ups and class participation is contingent on the timely submission of your initial responses.

All written assignments should be in a standard 12-point font and double-spaced with 1 inch margins, unless otherwise indicated. Reference lists do not count toward page requirements. All written assignments should conform to the APA style guide.

Note that discussions typically have two due dates: a date for the initial post, and a date for replies to classmates. Only the initial post due date will appear on the calendar and assignment page. The response due date is included in the discussion board instructions. You are responsible for meeting both due dates.

Late Submission Policy:

Work is due by the due dates set in Canvas.

If you have extenuating circumstances, please speak with me as soon as possible, and always in advance of the deadline. Turning in work late, even with instructor approval, may result in a reduction of your grade.

Assignments

There are a variety of assignments in this course, including reading notes, discussions, and papers and written assignments. All of these assignments are explained in detail within the Canvas platform. You will also find the corresponding grading rubric under the assignment instructions; for discussion boards, click on the gear icon to view the rubric.

Annotated Bibliography: (25% of your grade)

During this course, you will be asked to compile an annotated bibliography. Most modules contain an assignment in which you will complete some work toward your final annotated bibliography by locating an established number of articles, writing annotated bibliography entries for each of them, posting the entries to the discussion board, and reading and commenting on other posted entries.

Final Project: (15% of your grade)

Due: Modules 9 & 10

After choosing a research topic, you will develop a full research proposal including a literature review, methodology, research framework, and data collection and analysis. You will complete work towards your final proposal throughout the course, including building to your annotated bibliography and completing writing assignments which will inform your final proposal. At the end of the course, you will complete peer reviews of the proposals and prepare a presentation of your proposal to your instructor and peers.

Discussions: (15% of your grade)

In each module, you will be presented with a prompt relating to the reaching materials for the module. You will be asked to share an initial discussion post and respond to at least two of your peers' reflections.

Writing Assignments: (35% of your grade)

In several modules, you will be asked to submit a writing assignment, each of which informs and/or builds towards your final research proposal. These written assignments will include initial compilations of your annotated bibliography, ethical considerations for your proposal, and research critiques.

Read/Watch and Discuss: (10% of your grade)

In each Read or Watch and Discuss assignment, you will be presented with an article or case study and asked to evaluate it in the context of the materials and considerations of the module. You will be asked to both complete an initial post and provide feedback to some of your peers' responses.

Students are responsible for communicating their needs to the Academic Resource Center, the office that oversees disability support services, (202-687-8354; arc@georgetown.edu;) before the start of classes to allow time to review the documentation and make recommendations for appropriate accommodations. The University is not responsible for making special accommodations for students who have not declared their disabilities and have not requested an accommodation in a timely manner. Also, the University need not modify course or degree requirements considered to be an essential requirement of the program of instruction. For the most current and up-to-date policy information, please refer to the Georgetown University Academic Resource Center website. Students are highly encouraged to discuss the documentation and accommodation process with an Academic Resource Center administrator.

COMMUNICATIONS

GUIDELINES

Netiquette Guidelines

To promote the highest degree of education possible, we ask each student to respect the opinions and thoughts of other students and be courteous in the way that you choose to express yourself. The topics in this course can be controversial and promote debate. Students should be respectful and considerate of all opinions.

In order for us to have meaningful discussions, we must learn to genuinely try to understand what others are saying and be open-minded about others' opinions. If you want to persuade someone to see things differently, it is much more effective to do so in a polite, non-threatening way rather than to do so antagonistically. Everyone has insights to offer based on his/her experiences, and we can all learn from each other. Civility is essential.

Statement of Student Conduct, Civility, and Engagement

The School of Continuing Studies offers students the opportunity to engage with faculty, staff, and peers in ways that foster intellectual growth and development in their chosen field of study. It is important to recognize that each member of our community brings his or her own values, thoughts, perspectives, and experiences into each interaction. We expect students to behave in a manner that is civil and respectful of others, and appreciate the learning opportunities that come from engaging pluralistic perspectives in a dynamic educational environment.

Engagement within the SCS Georgetown community takes places in on-campus meeting spaces and classrooms, and extends to online learning platforms and forums. Students should be particularly mindful that participation in class discussions, group assignments, emails, blogs, and social media reflect upon them personally, academically, and professionally. All viewpoints, editorials, and opinions expressed by students represent those students exclusively – and not the students’ instructors, classmates, academic program, School, or University – even in cases when students are using Georgetown-affiliated systems like email, blogs, and online portfolios. The expectations for respect and civility are consistent for on-campus classes and spaces, as well as cyber, virtual, and online environments. Thus, civility and cybercivility are expected of all students, in all campus spaces.

SCS students are expected to adhere to the SCS guidelines for student conduct and the University Code of Student Conduct. In the event that a student's behavior is perceived to fall outside the stated SCS guidelines or may be a violation of the Code of Student Conduct, the matter may be referred to the Office of Student Conduct for further review and possible sanctioning. Such instances can include but are not limited to: disruption of official university functions (including teaching, research, administration), failure to comply with a directive issued by a University official, harassment and bullying, and incivility. For questions regarding the SCS student conduct expectations please review the policy in-full found in the Graduate Professional Studies Student Handbook. For questions about the Code of Student Conduct, please review the information provided by the Office of Student Conduct.

Communication with Peers

You will be expected to communicate with your peers via the discussion board.

Notifications

In this course we will use Canvas to send email for private messages. You can either check your messages in the Canvas system or set your notifications to your preferred method of contact. Please check your messages at least once per day. When submitting messages, please do the following:

- Put a subject in the subject box that describes the email content with your name and module.
- Do not send messages asking general information about the class, please post those in the General Questions Discussion Board Forum question forum.

Questions Forum

In online courses, everyone will likely have many questions about things that relate to the course, such as clarification about assignments and course materials. Please post these in the General Questions Discussion Board Forum, which you can access from the landing page. This is an open forum, and you are encouraged to give answers and help each other.

Turnaround and Feedback

If you have a concern and send me a message, you can expect a response within 48 hours. Please allow at least 72 hours for assessment submission feedback.
